

Congress of the United States

Washington, DC 20515

December 14, 2017

Sarah Isgur Flores
Director
Office of Public Affairs
U.S. Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington DC 20530

Dear Director Flores,

On the evening of December 12, 2017, the Department of Justice delivered to us a set of private text messages between FBI officials Peter Strzok and Lisa Page. It has been reported that the Department also invited a group of reporters to view these text messages—in private, at Department headquarters, and before delivery to congressional offices was complete.¹

On December 13, 2017, Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein appeared as a witness before the House Judiciary Committee. When Representatives Hakeem Jeffries (D-NY) and Jamie Raskin (D-MD) questioned him about the Department's sharing these sensitive text messages with the press, Mr. Rosenstein responded:

[A]s you know, I am not the public affairs officer, so I wouldn't know what the precedent was, but generally speaking our goal is to be as forthcoming with the media as we can, when it is lawful and appropriate to do so. So I would not approve anybody disclosing something that was not appropriate to disclose.²

When pressed further about the relevance of the text messages to an ongoing investigation by the Office of the Inspector General, Mr. Rosenstein said:

¹ Natasha Bertrand, In 'highly unusual' move, DOJ secretly invited reporters to view texts sent by ousted FBI agents, BUSINESS INSIDER, Dec. 13, 2017.

² Oversight Hearing with Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, before the H. Comm. on the Judiciary, Dec. 13, 2017 (statement of Deputy Attorney general Rod Rosenstein).

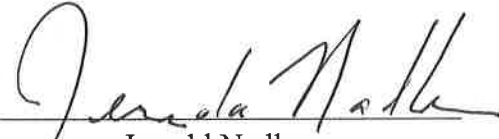

When this inquiry came in from the Congress, we did consult with the Inspector General to determine that he had no objection to the release of the material. If he had, I can assure you we would not have authorized the release.³

Mrs. Flores, you are the Department's public affairs officer, and we write to you for further clarification about this unusual move:

- A spokeswoman for the Department suggested that "career Justice officials evaluated the messages . . . to be sure they could be released 'under both ethical and legal standards.'" ⁴ Who at the Department made this evaluation?
- Who at the Department of Justice approved your decision to invite the press to view these text messages? Please provide all documents and communications regarding the decision to invite the press the view these text messages.
- Did you consult with any official at the Office of the Inspector General about sharing these text messages with the press prior to the Department's doing so?
- Who attended this media briefing? Please provide us with the names of the attendees, their media outlets, and copies of any documents or materials you may have provided or shown to the press at that time.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. We ask for your response no later than December 19, 2017.

Sincerely,

Jarrold Nadler
